DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR.

For those of a certain age, it is hard to imagine that 2026 will mark 58 years since the assassination of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in Memphis while he was standing on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel on April 4, 1968. Recalling how we felt when he first heard the news of Dr. King's murder still brings chills and a deep sense of sadness that never has subsided.

For those who are too young to have been alive in that era of American history, there are a few things that everyone should know about Dr. King that should provide inspiration to all of us.

First, Dr. King was fearless. He knew from the inception of his rise to prominence of the Civil Rights movement that he would become a target for those who opposed change. Yet, even though he often told others that he believed his death would be imminent, he did not relent in his fight to continue his work in the civil rights movement.

Second, Dr. King stood for the rights of all Americans, not merely those of color. He was in Memphis because he was working with striking sanitation workers, whose pay and working conditions he was seeking to help improve. He also was an outspoken critic of the Vietnam War because he knew it to be an unjust war, not only for poor Americans who could not get a college deferment for the draft, but also for the people of Vietnam, whose homeland was being bombed into oblivion at great profit for the American military-industrial complex.

Third, Dr. King spoke forcefully about the economic inequality that existed in the 1960s -- and that has been exacerbated exponentially today -- making the attainment of the American Dream all but impossible except for a select few.

If Dr. King were alive today, there is no doubt that he would be in the forefront of the protests against the barbaric deportation program by the federal government.

Dr. King's words ring as true today as they did two generations ago. His "I Have A Dream" and "I've Been to the Mountaintop" speeches are among the most powerful orations not only in American history, but in all of Western civilization.

All of us should learn from the example set by Dr. King. His life was a testament to the idea that each of us has the power to change the world -- and that each of us has the capacity to inspire others, whether through our words or deeds, whether on a small or large scale, to make the world a better place. Many of our fellow citizens have followed the path set by Dr. King and many more will do so in the years ahead.

Dr. King often would say, "The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends toward justice." Admittedly, that "bend" often has taken a less-than-direct path in recent years.

But as we celebrate Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day this Monday, let us recall not only his memory and the many things that he accomplished, but let us also resolve never to yield to the forces of intolerance, prejudice, and hate that continue to plague our country and the world today.

meaningful investment," said Campbell. "When I proposed the Environmental Justice Fund, along with Representative Fluker-Reid and Senator Gomez, I did so with the conviction that every neighborhood deserves clean air, safe water, and a healthy environment. These funds, which we procured by holding polluters accountable, will help repair historic harms and ensure that these resources flow directly to the communities most in need of our support."

Through the establishment of a regional CSA program, Eastie Farm plans to use the $25,000 it received to increase the access of fresh and affordable produce in East Boston, a federally recognized food desert. With this funding, Eastie Farm intends to connect two in-need groups by benefiting food insecure residents of East Boston with free and subsidized CSA shares and patronizing small, struggling farmers.

This project is in direct alignment with the New England Food Vision, which calls for the building of a local food system for health, economic, and climate resilience.

"We appreciate the Office of the Attorney General working with community-based organizations toward developing food procurement strategies that address economic and health needs of today while prioritizing environmental goals," said Kannan Thiruvengadam, Executive Director and Alex Graora, Development Manager of Eastie Farm.

GreenRoots received $25,000 for the Cool Community in Hot EJ Neighborhoods program.

The program has the goal of advancing climate justice in the frontline community of Chelsea, particularly along the Mill Creek waterfront, GreenRoots will use the funding to support community engagement in waterfront and ecological restoration efforts, the construction of a new permanent open space, and the development of a tree keeper stewardship program to increase Chelsea's tree canopy.

"We are so grateful for the support and partnership of Attorney General Andrea Campbell and her office who have been steadfastly working to ensure environmental justice populations are treated fairly and equitably, particularly in righting the environmental ills of decades of toxic pollution," said Roseann Bongiovanni, Executive Director of GreenRoots. "These communities, like Chelsea, have faced disproportionate exposures to toxic pollution for decades which has resulted in poor health outcomes, premature death and more. We're thrilled that Attorney General Campbell is ensuring pollution violation funds are being invested in EJ communities."

State Senator Sal DiDomenico said that environmental justice is one of his top priorities, and that he was excited to see Campbell award critical funding to organizations fighting environmental health disparities in his district.

"Thanks to this investment, GreenRoots, Green Cambridge, and Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health will be able to promote climate resilience, increase community engagement in restoration efforts, and improve environmental risk identification tools across the state," stated DiDomenico.

Boston City Council welcomes Councilor Miniard Culpepper

Special to the Times-Free Press

The Boston City Council welcomed Councilor Miniard Culpepper, who began his first term representing District 7 on January 5, following a recent inauguration ceremony.

Councilor Culpepper represents the neighborhood of Roxbury and sections of Dorchester, Fenway, and the South End. Born and raised on Seaver Street in Dorchester, he was shaped by a family legacy rooted in activism, faith, and community leadership. His grandparents were the first Black couple to live on Seaver Street, and his grandfather – a pastor and NAACP leader – marched with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and helped build one of Boston's first Black-owned nursery schools. That legacy instilled in him a lifelong commitment to justice and service.

Councilor Miniard Culpepper

A graduate of English High

School, Brandeis University, Howard Divinity School, and Suffolk University Law School, Councilor Culpepper's path to public service was deeply influenced by his early work as a lawyer, including a fight to help a friend purchase a boarded-up home in Grove Hall – an experience that shaped his understanding of housing as a cornerstone of dignity and opportunity.

His career in public service spans decades. As New England Regional Counsel for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Councilor Culpepper fought for tenants' rights, fair housing, and reinvestment in underserved neighborhoods. His work included implementing Boston's first Civil Rights Protection Plan in public housing, exposing racial discrimination at the Boston Housing Authority, and helping secure $25 million in federal funding to rebuild public housing developments across the city. He also advocated for affordable housing communities such as Academy Homes, A Field Estates, and the Franklin Park Apartments.

In addition to his federal service, Councilor Culpepper has remained deeply engaged at the community level. As Senior Pastor of Pleasant Hill Missionary Baptist Church, he founded the Trotter Peace Program to support mentorship and employment opportunities for young people of color and led the Six Point Peace Plan to reduce community violence. During the pandemic, he organized grassroots vaccination and food distribution efforts to support his neighbors.

As a member of the Boston City Council, Councilor Culpepper is committed to advancing housing stability, economic opportunity, strong schools, safe and healthy communities, and a city government that is transparent, accountable, and rooted in community voice.

Guided by faith, shaped by lived experience, and grounded in decades of public service, he begins his term ready to partner with residents to deliver results for District 7 and help shape a more just and inclusive Boston.

Healey announces safety reforms following release of the ALR Commission's final report

Special to the Times-Free Press

Governor Maura Healey announced a comprehensive set of reforms to strengthen safety, transparency and consumer protections in assisted living residences (ALRs) across Massachusetts. This action follows the submission of the ALR Commission's final report to the Legislature, which outlines both regulatory and legislative solutions to improve the safety and well-being of residents.

The ALR Commission was established through the 2024 Act to Improve Quality and Oversight of Long-Term Care and undertook an extensive review of the ALR sector to ensure it continues to meet the needs of an aging population while prioritizing resident health and safety. The Commission was expected to file its final report on August 1, 2025. Following the tragic fire at Gabriel House in Fall River, Governor Healey signed into law an extension passed by the Legislature so that the Commission had additional time to incorporate lessons learned from the fire. The Commission voted unanimously by those in attendance to approve its final report on January 12, 2026.

The Commission's recommendations aim to ensure ALRs continue to meet the evolving needs of older adults while significantly strengthening transparency and oversight, emergency preparedness, staffing, and consumer protections. The Commission met 16 times, held two public hearings, and incorporated direct feedback from residents, families, industry experts, and first responders. Key recommendations include:

Stronger Fire Safety & Emergency Preparedness Standards – enhance inspections and coordination with local fire departments to prevent future tragedies.

Transparent Public Data – create a new statewide online database to provide families with clear access to compliance records, ownership information, and corrective action plans.

Standardize Disclosures – standardize information on services, costs, staffing, and resident rights for easier comparison across ALRs.

Staffing & Nursing Leadership Requirements – ensure every ALR has access to licensed nursing support and leadership training that matches resident needs.

Clear Assessment Practices – ensure consistent evaluations of resident needs with clear notice of any cost or care changes.

Affordability Task Force – create a task force to evaluate new models that expand access for low- and middle-income older adults.

The Healey-Driscoll Administration is taking immediate action to begin the implementation of a majority of the regulatory and administrative recommendations in this report.

"Every older adult deserves a safe home and peace of mind, and every family deserves transparency and accountability," said Governor Maura Healey. "The heartbreaking tragedy at Gabriel House showed us that we cannot wait to strengthen protections for assisted living residents. We are taking immediate action on these recommendations so we can better protect residents, support families and ensure our assisted living system continues to serve people well into the future."

"Massachusetts has a responsibility to protect residents in every single assisted living community, and families are counting on us to get this right," said Aging & Independence Secretary and ALR Commission Chair Robin Lipson. "These changes will strengthen fire safety, clarify standards and practices that impact resident well-being, and make critical information more accessible so families can make informed decisions. We have already begun putting stronger protections in place and will work to ensure that residents across the Commonwealth are safer, better supported, and treated with the dignity they deserve."

The Commission recommends legislative action to further strengthen resident safety and consumer protections, including establishing a dedicated funding mechanism to expand state oversight and public reporting, amending state law to authorize certified medication aides in assisted living settings, and creating a statewide registry for ALR executive directors. The report also urges the review of ALR building classifications and the modernization of building code requirements. Finally, the Commission recommends forming an ALR Affordability Task Force to look into sustainable models that expand access for low- and middle-income older adults.

"These recommendations are very important. The Gabriel House fire in Fall River increased the urgency of action," said Senator Patricia Jehlen, member of the ALR Commission. "AGE can implement most of the recommendations about transparency and emergency preparedness without legislation. But it's important to give them the budgetary resources to enforce the rules. The legislature needs to act on the recommended statutory changes, including establishing a dedicated and sustainable funding mechanism, supported by certification and recertification fees and fines."

"ALRs are an important pillar of the Commonwealth's continuum of care for our aging population, helping older adults age in place and maintain their independence. The health, safety and well-being of these residents is paramount. This principle guided the Commission's deliberations over the past year, especially following the devastating fire at Gabriel House in Fall River," said Representative Thomas Stanley, member of the ALR Commission. "I am proud of the comprehensive recommendations the Commission produced in this final report and look forward to the work ahead, including establishing the proposed ALR Affordability Task Force. I'd like to thank my fellow commission members for their service on behalf of our older adults in ALRs and their caregivers, and salute Secretary Lipson and her team at AGE for their incredible leadership and engagement throughout this process."

"While there are quality residences across Massachusetts, inadequate regulations have allowed bad actors to persist for far too long," said Senator Mark Montigny, lead legislative sponsor of the ALR Commission. "As the devastating Gabriel House fire showed, vulnerable lives are at stake and we need to continue to demand more action from legislators, regulators, and residence owners. I appreciate the hard work of this commission over the past year to come to a set of actionable recommendations that can be implemented immediately and in the near future to help protect residents and im-

Her faith was the cornerstone of her existence, and she served God with grace and humility

Mary J. O'Connor, of Revere, formerly of East Boston, a woman of profound faith, an unswerving servant to her family and community, and a dedicated worker, entered into eternal rest on January 5, 2026, at the age of 79. She was born in Laconia, NH on September 25, 1946, to the late John W. O'Connor and Barbara A. (Sullivan).

Mary was a devoted member of the St. Vincent de Paul Society at Holy Cross in Boston. Her faith was the cornerstone of her existence, and she served God with grace and humility. She was not only an active member of her church but also served as Chapter President, Eucharistic Minister, and CCD teacher. Mary's faith was not confined to words but was manifested in her actions and her unwavering dedication to serving others.

Mary was an independent, fun-loving, and spunky lady who always enjoyed a good time. She spent her professional life in the air freight industry, contributing her skills as an accountant to both Tiger Air Freight and later Pilot Air Freight. Mary's interests included bowling, knitting, reading, and traveling. She and her mother spent many annual summer vacations together enjoying the beach on the Cape. She also spent many annual winter weekends at the Mount Washington Hotel. Mary graciously hosted her family for Thanksgiving and Easter dinners in her home. Family members continue to treasure the hand-knitted blankets she lovingly made for them.

She was a caring sister to Thomas C. O'Connor and his late wife, Barbara Ann, of Reading, and to the late John J. O'Connor and his wife, Theresa. She was a beloved aunt to Sean O'Connor and his wife, Gina, and their children: John, Myles and William; Kevin O'Connor and his fiancée, Meghan Lynch, Erin O'Connor and her husband, James Cphoon, and their children: Michaela, Bronwyn and Sloan; Jayne Tomforde and her husband, Carl, and their children Sydney and Karlie; and Jeffrey O'Connor and his wife, Mimi, and their children, Patrick and Caitlin. She is also survived by many cousins and dear friends.

In the words of the Apostle Paul, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith." Mary O'Connor lived a life that truly echoed these words. Her life was a testament to her faith and her love for her family and her community. We invite all who knew and loved Mary to share their memories and upload photos to her memorial page at www.buonfiglio.com.

State Fire Marshal reminds bars and clubs of sparkler hazard

Special to the Times-Free Press

State Fire Marshal Jon M. Davine sent a notice to Massachusetts bars and restaurants regarding the fire hazard posed by sparklers, which are believed to have contributed to the tragic New Year’s Eve fire that claimed dozens of lives in a Switzerland bar.

“Please be advised that sparklers and other pyrotechnic devices, including so-called ‘cold spark’ pyrotechnics, are illegal for possession, sale, and use in Massachusetts without professional licensing, certification, and permitting,” State Fire Marshal Davine wrote in a notice to proprietors of restaurants, nightclubs, bars, and discotheques. “This includes small sparklers that have been sold as novelties or party favors to accompany champagne bottles, which are believed to have caused the New Year’s Eve fire that claimed 40 lives and injured more than 100 people in Crans-Montana, Switzerland.”

The Marshal thanked the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, which has provided the notice to local licensing officials for distribution to licensed establishments, and the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, which is distributing the notice to its members.

Separately, the Department of Fire Services issued a notice to a Hialeah, Florida, business that markets sparklers online. This business, King of Sparklers LLC, reportedly sold and shipped sparklers that were later recovered by Fall River Fire Department inspectors at a local establishment.

“The shipment of prohibited fireworks products into the Commonwealth constitutes a violation of Massachusetts General Law and the Massachusetts Comprehensive Fire Code and presents a significant public safety concern,” the notice stated.

State Fire Marshal Davine said that sparklers burn at temperatures of over 1,800° Fahrenheit and cast sparks that can easily ignite furnishings, decorations, and other flammable materials. They can remain hot enough to start a fire even after they’ve been extinguished, as happened in 2022, when the unsafe disposal of illegal sparklers caused a three-alarm fire in Dracut that displaced nine people. They are classified as fireworks in Massachusetts and their possession, sale, and use require professional licensing and certification.

“The tragic fire in Switzerland has a chilling similarity to the Station Nightclub fire in Rhode Island, which led to numerous safety reforms in Massachusetts bars and clubs,” State Fire Marshal Davine said, noting the sprinkler regulations, inspection schedules, and crowd manager requirements that are now in place in Massachusetts. “We just want to help these businesses keep their patrons and staff safe.”

prove the overall assisted living model in the Commonwealth.”

“I would like to thank the commission for their thoughtful review of existing policies and procedures and for the recommendations outlined in this report that will provide for important enhanced safety measures for all residents of assisted living centers throughout the state in the aftermath of the tragic Gabriel House fire,” said Fall River Mayor Paul Coogan.

“I am gratified to see the ALR Commission release its report detailing a number of comprehensive reforms that will strengthen safety and increase transparency for ALRs all across the Commonwealth. The extensive reviews following the tragic fire at the Gabriel House will ensure that our seniors will not only have the latest in health and safety protocols in place, but that ALR staff will be equipped with the highest training and certifications standards in the industry.

The new statewide online database will also provide families with clear access to important compliance records, ownership information, and mandate that their facility has a proven corrective action plan in place,” said Senator Michael J. Rodrigues, Chair of the Senate Committee on Ways and Means. “All older adults deserve a safe dwelling and their families the utmost in transparency and accountability for the aging parents.”

“The ALR Commission Report and recommendations delivers achievable goals. Legislative action is needed to ensure uniformity and compliance,” said Representative Alan Silvia (D-Fall River).

“After our community experienced the tragic and deadly fire at Gabriel House last year, we have been evaluating necessary remedies and changes to prevent catastrophes like this,” said Representative Carole Fiola (D-Fall River). “Thanks to the work of this Commission, we are seeing important changes to help improve safety, affordability, and care. Thank you to Secretary Lipson and my colleague Chair Stanley for their tireless dedication to this issue.”

“I thank the ALR Commission for the work and report, it brings attention to needed improvements. I applaud the state’s commitment to promptly addressing the issues and listening to concerns brought forward,” said Representative Steven J. Ouellette (D-Westport). “I strongly support efforts to avoid serious incidents, particularly those that help our seniors and those ability hindered.”

The Commission’s report contains a comprehensive set of reforms that will significantly improve resident safety and ensure families have the information they need to make informed decisions.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE REGION

JIMENEZ-RIVERA NEW COUNCIL PRESIDENT FOR 2026

CHELSEA - City Councilor-at-Large Roberto Jimenez-Rivera was sworn in as the new Council President for 2026 at Monday night's inaugural event for the council and the school committee.

District 3 Councilor Norieliz DeJesus, who has served as council president for the past two years, was the pick to serve as vice president.

In his remarks to open the new council year, Jimenez-Rivera thanked his wife, Dr. Sarah Neville, who was also inaugurated earlier in the evening for a new term on the school committee.

"I am a better leader for Chelsea because of her, and her leadership, both on and off the school committee, makes Chelsea a better place," he said.

Jimenez-Rivera said his story was not unique, but was the story of many in Chelsea.

"For over 100 years, Chelsea has been a gateway city, the first stop for migrants seeking better opportunities, seeking a community where people care for one another, and seeking a place where they can start or grow their families further," said Jimenez-Rivera. "Black Americans, Irish, Italians, Poles, Jews, Puerto Ricans, Central Americans, African Muslims, and so many more peoples have made Chelsea home because we share dreams and we share values."

Being a gateway city is not just about welcoming people at the door, he added, but taking care of residents after they arrive.

"It's about making sure that our services, our policies, and our public spaces reflect our values," Jimenez-Rivera said. "It is about making sure all our residents feel protected, valued, and heard no matter where they come from, how much they earn, or how long they have been here."

He noted that during the Covid pandemic, the city came together to feed and vaccinate people.

"Over the last year, we had to come together again to protect our residents from being terrorized by ICE agents who would rather use them as puppets for political theater than treat them with the dignity that we all deserve as human beings," Jimenez-Rivera said. "I am proud to live and to lead in a city that sees the best in people, that will keep working until everyone has their basic needs met, and at its core, knows that no human being is illegal."

The new council president said the issues faced by Chelsea's residents extend beyond the city's boundaries.

"Our residents are afraid, they are afraid that they will not be able to put enough food on the table; they are afraid that regardless of their immigration status, they are going to be targeted by ICE just for the color of their skin," Jimenez-Rivera said. "They are afraid that after decades of hard work, their children will be worse off than them. As council president and as a human being, I will not stand for that."

Jimenez-Rivera said he wants Chelsea not just to survive, but to thrive, and that it will require a sense of urgency.

"Urgency is necessary not because Chelsea is broken, Chelsea is strong, look at all of us here," he said. "Urgency is necessary because delay has consequences and the choices we make today are going to determine whether Chelsea remains a place where opportunity is real and where dignity is not negotiable. Our residents have waited for things to get better, and that wait has only grown longer and heavier."

He said Chelsea's leaders must be bold and act quickly to tackle the issues faced by residents, including affordability for young families and senior citizens.

"We must reform our policies, our zoning, our long-term planning if we are going to make sure that Chelsea can retain its character of a multi-cultural community of working families," Jimenez-Rivera said. "I invite my colleagues to join me in working with urgency for Chelsea. We won't achieve it all, and we might even fail at times, but we can't let anybody say that we didn't try and that we didn't give it our best."

Also sworn into the council on Monday night were District 1 Councilor Todd Taylor, District 2 Councilor Deron Hines, District 5 Councilor Lisa Santagate, District 6 Councilor Giovanni Recupero, District 7 Councilor Manuel Teshe, District 8 Councilor Calvin T. Brown, and at-large Councilors Leo Robinson and Kelly Garcia.

District 4 Councilor Taniari Garcia was unable to attend the meeting because she was in Puerto Rico and flights to the United States over the Caribbean were canceled due to the recent actions in Venezuela. She will be sworn in when she returns.

Hines was the one new councilor sworn in for 2026, and he was joined in the audience by a large contingent of friends and family.

VAN CAMPEN INAUGURATED AS MAYOR OF EVERETT

EVERETT - Robert Van Campen was inaugurated as Mayor of the City of Everett at an impressive ceremony Monday night in the Everett High School Performing Arts Center.

With his wife, Lisa Van Campen, and their children, Lily Van Campen and John Van Campen, by his side on stage, Van Campen took the oath of office as mayor from City Clerk Sergio Cornelio. The large audience gave Van Campen a standing ovation as he begins what he has called "a new chapter" for Everett and its residents.

Gov. Maura Healey and Congresswoman Ayanna Pressley attended the inauguration ceremony in a prodigious display of prestige and respect for Van Campen and the city. Sen. Sal DiDomenico, Rep. Joseph McGonagle, Middlesex County DA Marian Ryan, and Clerk of Courts Michael Sullivan were other dignitaries in attendance.

Members of the Everett City Council and Everett School Committee were inaugurated for their new two-year terms.

Van Campen delivered an inaugural address that can be described best as brilliant, uplifting, and optimistic about the city's future.

Van Campen said, "This moment belongs not to one person, but to an entire city - a city built by generations of hardworking families."

He noted the historical significance of this point in Everett's political history, stating, "To our female elected officials, I am deeply proud to begin my tenure in office while working with a City Council and School Committee that will - for the first time in our City's history - be represented by a majority of women."

In one of the more heartfelt moments in his address, Van Campen said to his children, "I may hold a new title tonight, but being your father is the greatest title I will ever have. Thank you for the privilege of being your dad."

Van Campen said he will strive with Supt. of Schools William Hart, the City Council, and the School Committee "to make a great school system into an urban model of excellence."

Van Campen reached out for unity across the city.

"To those who supported me, thank you for your trust and confidence. To those who did not, I promise to be a mayor for all of Everett. Let us begin tonight to write our next great chapter together," concluded Van Campen.

Mayor Robert Van Campen's inaugural address

"Good evening.

Governor Healy, Representative Pressley, District Attorney Ryan, Clerk of Courts Sullivan, members of the state delegation, members of the City Council, members of the School Committee, former Mayors, Reverend Clergy, Lisa, Lily and John, mom, to my sisters, family and friends, my fellow citizens.

I am deeply honored to stand before you as Mayor of the City of Everett. I do so with a great sense of humility, a clear understanding of the challenges ahead, and a commitment to put every single person in this community at the center of each decision I will make during the next four years.

I am also honored to be Mayor of a community that boasts such incredibly talented young people. Would you please join me in recognizing our great student ambassadors who made sure we were where we needed to be tonight, and our incredible musicians in the band and choir whose talents are on full display tonight. Thank you.

I would like to take a moment to express my gratitude to Mayor Carlo DeMaria for his years of dedicated service to our community. His leadership and commitment have helped guide this city through challenges and opportunities - always with a clear focus on moving our city forward. On behalf of the people of Everett, I thank him for his stewardship these past 18 years and wish him continued success in the next chapter of his life.

I also want to thank my family for their constant support - particularly my wife Lisa - Everett's new First Lady - for completing the person you see before you this evening. Like me, the people of Everett will fall in love with your combination of grace, spunk and an unassuming way.

To my children, Lily and John, I may hold a new title tonight, but being your father is the greatest title I will ever have. Thank you for the privilege of being your dad.

I also want to particularly thank Father James Barry for opening our Inaugural Exercises with prayer this evening. You married Lisa and I, and baptized Lily and John. You have been there during some of the happiest and saddest moments for my family. Your presence means a great deal to us - and I wanted to publicly thank you for that.

While I assume office today, this moment belongs not to one person, but to an entire city - a city built by generations of hardworking families.

To the parents who emigrated here with nothing but hope for a better life for their children.

To the small business owners who unlock their doors before sunrise and close after sunset, humbly keeping our neighborhoods alive.

To the union workers who fight for fair wages and teach us what solidarity - something near and dear to me - really looks like.

To the fire fighters, police officers, teachers and city workers who show up on weekends, holidays, and in the hardest moments, never for recognition, but because this city depends on them. This is your moment too.

To our female elected officials, I am deeply proud to begin my tenure in office while working with a City Council and School Committee that will - for the first time in our City's history - be represented by a majority of women. As the youngest of five children – three of whom are women – I have been made to master the art of navigating this dynamic effectively throughout my life, feel very much at home being outnumbered and look forward to our shared work on behalf of the people of Everett. Ladies this is your moment too.

We are a city with an incredible history and unlimited potential. Tonight, the people of Everett – a community defined by a proud industrial past that shaped the United States of America in the 20th Century and gave thousands of Everett families for generations their chance at the American Dream– are ready to write a new chapter.

While I may hold the pen to write that new chapter, that story will be told by the people of Everett from our Woodlawn section to West Everett, from the Line to North Everett – and everywhere in between.

It will be told by every student – young and old – who dreams of greatness; and by every hardworking educator who helps those dreams come true. YOU will help write this next chapter.

To our incredible business community, our partners in creating a thriving local economy – YOU will help write this next chapter.

To all of our dedicated public servants who have devoted their professional lives to improving and protecting our community – YOU will help write this next chapter.

This chapter will be written within the walls of our houses of worship; by our many community volunteers and our network of incredible community organizations; by young parents taking their children to our parks and playgrounds; by our seniors and our cherished veterans; and by people new to Everett and those who have been here for generations.

All are respected, all are valued and all are welcomed to come together as one community to form an incredible tapestry in celebration of our rich diversity – our greatest strength. To the people of Everett – this is our time to write a new chapter.

But make no mistake, I will not stop honoring our history. I mean, where else can you get a papusa, pichana and home-made pasta all within a block?

Today, our city stands at an important crossroads. As we grow and change, we face both a profound responsibility and an historic opportunity to move Everett forward with integrity, fairness and accountability.

We must rebuild trust in government at a time when – at the federal, state and local level – trust is lacking; we must ensure that every tax dollar is spent with clear purpose, full transparency, and public oversight; we must tackle the crisis-level challenge of school overcrowding so our children have the classrooms they deserve and need in which to receive a world class education; we must guide smart, equitable development that benefits our neighborhoods, eases traffic and congestion, while preserving affordability for working families; and we must thoughtfully steward major initiatives like the proposed professional soccer stadium on lower Broadway so growth truly serves the people of Everett, and not just special interests.

As mayor, my commitment to each of you is grounded in three principles.

First, service to the people of Everett. City government must be accessible, responsive, and fair. Every resident—regardless of background, neighborhood, or length of time in Everett—deserves to be heard and respected.

Second, unity and collaboration. Our city has always been at its strongest when we work together. I will seek partnership with the City Council, School Committee, our federal and state delegations, city employees, community organizations, and residents. We may disagree at times – and I assure you we will – but we will always move forward with respect and a shared commitment to the common good. Tonight, I ask that you join me in ushering in a new era of civility here at home. While we may not be able to control what happens beyond our borders, let's show our children that we can disagree without disparagement, name calling or personal attack. Let's start that new era of civility tonight right here in Everett.

Third, responsible progress with accountability. We will pursue smart economic development that creates jobs, supports local businesses, and strengthens and grows our tax base—while also protecting our quality of life. We will invest in public safety, infrastructure, schools, and city services, and we will be transparent and accountable in how decisions are made.

And I turn with all of the authority of my office to Superintendent Hart, and my colleagues on the City Council and School Committee, and every stakeholder in this community, and ask that you join me in finding the right solution to address our current school overcrowding crisis.

Together we can make a great school system into an urban model of excellence and success, where teachers aren't overwhelmed by packed classrooms and children get the attention they deserve.

My administration will focus on keeping Everett safe, fiscally sound, and welcoming. We will work to ensure our streets are secure, our city services are responsive and reliable, our schools are supported, and our neighborhoods remain places where families can thrive.

But government alone cannot do this work. Everett's strength has always come from its people—neighbors looking out for one another, volunteers giving their time, and residents who care deeply about this city. I invite every resident to stay engaged, speak up, and be part of shaping Everett's future as we write this next chapter.

To those who supported me, thank you for your trust and confidence. To those who did not, I promise to be a mayor for all of Everett. To the people of Everett, I will listen to you, I will learn from you, and I will lead with fairness and integrity.

Let us move forward together—honoring Everett's proud past, meeting today's challenges head-on, and building a future that reflects the hopes of all who are privileged to call this city home. Let us begin tonight to write our next great chapter together.

Thank you. God bless you, and God bless the City of Everett."

Significant drought conditions declared in central and northeast regions

Drought conditions worsen in the Southeast Region, Nantucket County and Millers Basin, while conditions have improved in Dukes County

Special to the Times-Free Press

Energy and Environmental Affairs (EEA) Secretary Rebecca Tepper has declared the Central and Northeast Regions have worsened to a Level 2–Significant Drought. Conditions also declined in nearly all other regions, moving the Southeast Region to a Level–1 Mild Drought and the Millers River Basin to a Level 3–Critical Drought. In the Islands Region, Dukes County has returned to Normal Conditions, and Nantucket County has moved to a Level 3–Critical Drought. Conditions remain unchanged in the Western, Connecticut River Valley, and Cape Cod Regions.

Drought is a look back at conditions over a period of time. The Drought Management Task Force (DMTF) collected and analyzed data from August 2024 through December 2025. Despite minor improvements at a few locations, drought conditions have continued in most of Massachusetts.

“Continued snow and rainfall are needed to alleviate the drought that many regions in our state are experiencing this winter,” said EEA Secretary Rebecca Tepper. “Groundwater levels still need to recover, so as we get closer to the growing season, we encourage everyone to continue to follow state guidance and local water restrictions. This will help ensure we have enough water available for our essential needs.”

During December, Massachusetts received rainfall ranging from 3 to 4 inches, but the month ended with totals at 1-2 inches below normal. However, when looking back over the past 3 to 6 months, precipitation deficits persist.

The current drought, which began in 2024, has had significant impacts on the natural environment, including the drying of streams in nearly all regions, lower water levels in lakes and ponds, resulting in exposed banks, and impeding fish passage out to the ocean. Although local water supplies are currently stable, as the drought persists and winter recharge is reduced, it is prudent for all to be very conservative and save water whenever possible.

As outlined in the Massachusetts Drought Management Plan, continued detailed monitoring of drought conditions must continue. The drought levels also require ongoing coordination among state and federal agencies to implement drought response actions such as water use restrictions. Additionally, engagement with municipalities, including local Boards of Health (BOH), is essential. This includes providing technical outreach and assistance to water suppliers and affected municipalities. Residents are asked to report to their local BOH in case of wells drying up; BOHs are asked to report on the condition of local private wells.

Residents can report dry environmental conditions and submit photos to help monitor the situation on the Massachusetts Water Impact Reporter. Additionally, a FAQ is now available for questions regarding the current drought status and water conservation; and private well owners can go here for information on how the drought may impact them.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP) will continue to assist communities in managing their water systems. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) water supply system is not experiencing drought conditions.

Below are recommendations for communities and individuals living and working within a Level 1–Mild Drought, Level 2–Significant Drought, Level 3–Critical Drought including those utilizing a private well. Residents and businesses are strongly urged to check with their local water system in case more stringent watering restrictions are in place. Many systems may have other more severe local conditions and constraints on water supply.

For Regions in Level 3 – Critical Drought

- Residents and Businesses:
- Minimize overall water use
 - Follow state water conservation actions and any local water use restrictions
 - Monitor total household water use shown on your water bill for sudden increases, which often indicate leaks. Use the MA Home Water Use Calculator tool to evaluate household water use.
 - Fix any toilet or faucet leaks immediately. Check for leaks in homes and businesses regularly by:
 - Checking water meters for constant dial movement
 - Using dye tabs to check for toilet leaks
 - Conducting regular inspections of all pipes and fixtures, including those located in utility rooms, crawlspaces, and other hidden areas
 - Use dishwashers rather than handwashing dishes. Run the dishwasher only on a full load
 - Aggressively reduce indoor water use by:
 - Reducing shower length and consider using a shower timer
 - Running washing machines only on a full load
 - Not letting water run while brushing and shaving
 - Replacing old fixtures and appliances with water-efficient ones. Make sure toilets, faucets, and showerheads are WaterSense labeled
 - Stop all non-essential water use

Immediate Steps for Communities/ Municipalities:

- Provide timely information on the drought and on water conservation tips to local residents and businesses taking advantage of the state’s library of outreach materials
- Enforce water use restrictions with increasingly stringent penalties
- Strongly discourage or prohibit washing of hard surfaces (sidewalks, patios, driveways, siding); personal vehicle or boat washing
- Establish or enhance water-use reduction targets for all water users, identify top water users and conduct targeted outreach to help curb their use

Short- and Medium-Term Steps for Communities/ Municipalities:

- Establish a year-round water conservation program that includes public education and communication, taking advantage of the state’s library of outreach materials
- Implement or establish drought surcharge or seasonal water rates
- Prepare to activate emergency inter-connections for water supply
- Develop or refine your local drought management plan using guidance outlined in the state Drought Management Plan

For Regions in Level 2 – Significant Drought

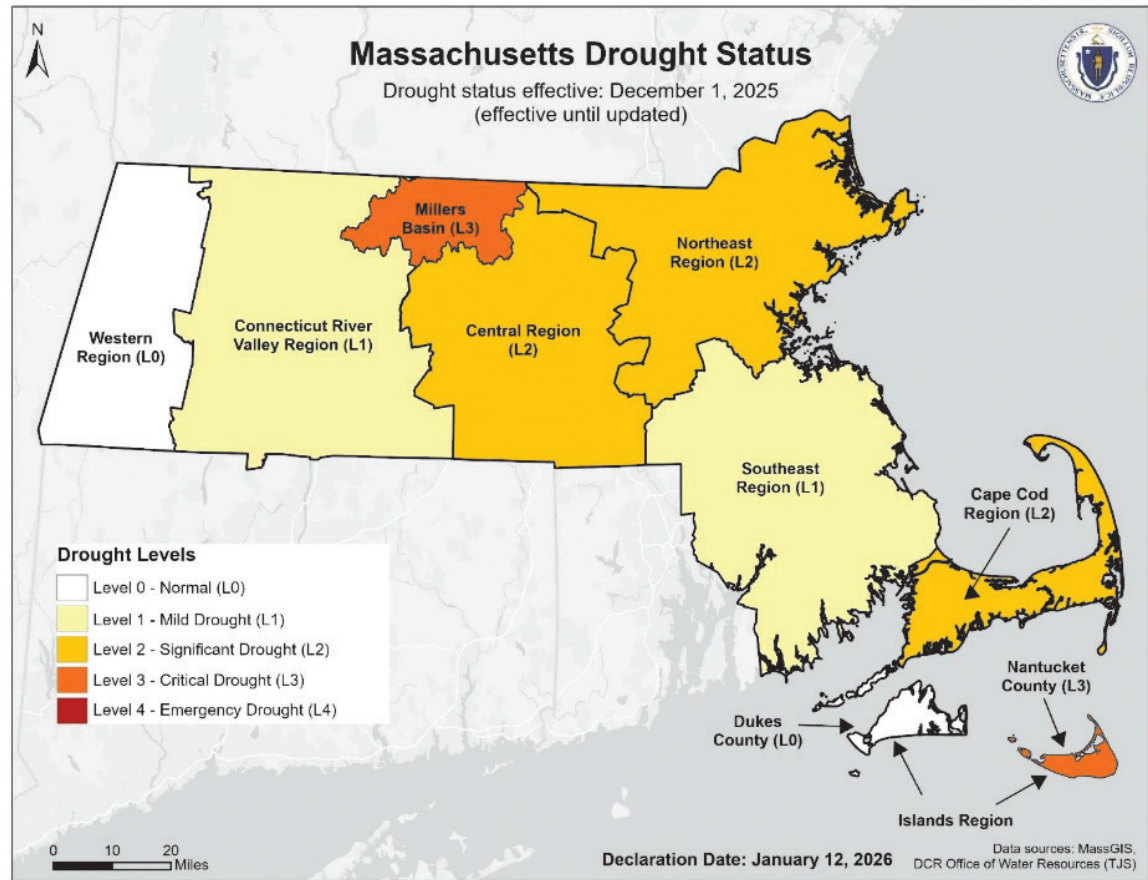

- Residents and Businesses:
- Minimize overall water use;
 - Follow local water use restrictions;
 - Fix indoor leaks, such as from toilets, faucets, and showers, which result in more than 60 percent of indoor use; and,
 - For larger buildings and businesses, conduct water audits to identify areas of leaks and potential water conservation opportunities.

Immediate Steps for Communities/ Municipalities:

- Limit or prohibit washing of hard surfaces (sidewalks, patios, driveways, siding); personal vehicle or boat washing; and,
- Establish water-use reduction targets for all water users, identify top water users and conduct targeted outreach to help curb their use.

Short- and Medium-Term Steps for Communities/ Municipalities:

- Establish a year-round water conservation program that includes public education and communication, taking advantage of the states library of outreach materials;
- Provide timely information to local residents and businesses;
- Implement or establish drought surcharge or seasonal water rates;
- Check emergency inter-connections for water supply; and,

Healey-Driscoll administration awards over $2 million for salt marsh restoration

Special to the Times-Free Press

The Healey-Driscoll Administration today announced more than $2 million in new funding to restore and monitor salt marshes along the Massachusetts' coastline. Salt marshes protect communities from flooding, prevent damage from storms and rising seas, serve as habitat for fisheries and wildlife, and absorb carbon that would otherwise contribute to climate change.

"Salt marshes are a defining feature of the iconic Massachusetts coastline, which is why we made expediting these projects a core provision of the Mass Ready Act," said Energy and Environmental Affairs Secretary Rebecca Tepper. "Salt marshes are powerful natural defenses—absorbing floodwaters, reducing storm surge, and protecting our communities during extreme weather events. Preserving and restoring these vital ecosystems is essential to building a more resilient Massachusetts."

"The actions we take today to protect our salt marshes will affect our climate resilience for generations," said Climate Chief Melissa Hoffer. "These restoration and monitoring efforts will create a stronger, living ecosystem that will defend our communities against harsh storms and flooding.

This funding goes a long way toward protecting natural resources and addressing climate change."

The Salt Marsh Restoration and Monitoring grants, administered by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP), will support seven projects to restore and monitor degraded salt marsh ecosystems. The resulting data will help identify particularly effective restoration techniques, and combinations of techniques, to inform future restoration efforts and investment.

"Salt marshes play a vital role in filtering pollutants, improving water quality, and protecting the health of our ecosystems and communities," said MassDEP Commissioner Bonnie Heiple. "We're grateful to the many partners who have long prioritized protection and restoration of these unique ecosystems and look forward to ongoing work together to ensure salt marshes can perform these critical functions for generations to come."

The following grant proposals were selected for funding:

Permitting of Salt Marsh Restoration at Belle Isle Marsh
Mystic River Watershed Association (Boston) – $40,000

These grants are the latest step in the Healey-Driscoll Administration's work to promote resilience and support ecological restoration projects. Other recent initiatives have included streamlined provisions for permitting restoration projects in the Mass Ready Act, and MassDEP's issuance of guidance documents to promote salt marsh restoration. Additionally, these projects support the Massachusetts Biodiversity Goals, which name salt marsh restoration as a priority, and the Department of Fish & Game's Blue Carbon Program, which is exploring financial incentives to drive protection of these critical habitats to help the state meet its net-zero goals.

MCCA Board appoints John Barros Interim Executive Director

Special to the Times-Free Press

The Massachusetts Convention Center Authority (MCCA) Board of Directors voted unanimously to appoint John Barros as Interim Executive Director of the Authority, with a start date of January 14, 2026.

Barros brings more than 25 years of leadership experience across the public, private, and nonprofit sectors, with a dedicated career focused on economic development, equitable growth, and community impact. From 2014 to 2021, he served as Chief of Economic Development for the City of Boston, where he led the creation of a newly consolidated Economic Development Cabinet focused on equity and inclusion, and advanced initiatives to create jobs, strengthen tourism, train the workforce, and revitalize neighborhoods.

Most recently, Barros served as Managing Principal at Civitas Builders, a Boston-based firm focused on improving communities through responsive real estate development and strategic project execution.

"As Massachusetts prepares for an extraordinary, nation-leading year ahead for events, tourism and economic development, the MCCA is going to play a pivotal role," said Governor Maura Healey. "I'm confident that under John's experienced and strategic leadership, the Authority will continue fulfilling its mission to boost our economy and competitiveness, and I thank the MCCA Board for its work to ensure stability at this vital organization."

Earlier in his career, Barros spent 14 years as Executive Director of the Dudley Street Neighborhood Initiative (DSNI), leading the nation's largest urban community land trust and helping establish it as a national model for community-driven development and equitable neighborhood revitalization.

"John will bring dynamic leadership to this important role at a consequential moment for Boston and the Commonwealth," said Boston Mayor Michelle Wu. "His economic development experience, knowledge of the city, and dedication to community will steer the MCCA to greater collaboration and success. I look forward to working with him on making Boston the leading destination and hub—starting with preparing for a big summer as we host the 250th commemorations, Tall Ships, and the World Cup."

As chief of Economic Development for the City of Boston under Mayor Martin J. Walsh, Barros co-chaired the development of Imagine Boston, the city's first citywide comprehensive plan, and oversaw initiatives focused on access to capital, local wealth creation, job connections, and neighborhood-centered growth. Under his leadership, Boston added 140,000 new jobs and significantly expanded public investment in workforce development and community-centered economic strategies.

"I am honored to step into this role at such a critical moment for the MCCA and grateful to the Board for their support and confidence," said John Barros. "As a world-class cultural and economic engine, what happens here impacts not just Boston, but the entire Commonwealth. I am looking forward to working with the team and ensuring we continue to deliver on our mission of driving economic impact, fostering a fair and equitable workplace, and event excellence."

As Interim Executive Director, Barros will oversee the MCCA's venue portfolio and operations, including the Thomas M. Menino Convention & Exhibition Center, the John B. Hynes Veterans Memorial Convention Center, the MassMutual Center, and the Lawn on D, while advancing the Authority's mission to drive economic impact through events and tourism.

The Massachusetts Convention Center Authority owns and oversees the operations of the Thomas M. Menino Convention & Exhibition Center (MCEC), the John B. Hynes Veterans Memorial Convention Center, the MassMutual Center, Convention Center Carpark & The Landing in Springfield, MA, the Boston Common Parking Garage, The Lawn On D and The Lot On D. The MCCA's mission is to deliver world-class event experiences that drive statewide economic growth, foster innovation, and exceed customer expectations all while cultivating a workplace culture that values excellence, inclusivity, and employee well-being.

Celebrate Catholic Schools Week 2026

January 25 - January 31

#CSW26

Catholic Schools
United in Faith and Community

National Catholic Schools Week (CSW) is the annual celebration of Catholic education in the United States. CSW runs from the last Sunday in January through the following Saturday.

The Catholic Schools Week (CSW) 2023 – 2026 theme is "Catholic Schools: United in Faith and Community." Catholic schools have an irreplaceable role in the Church's evangelizing mission. Building on the central goal of Catholic schools to form saints, Catholic schools teach and embrace the whole person, body, mind and spirit. The fact that all members of a Catholic school community share the Christian vision of faith that Christ is the foundation of Catholic education is what unites the school as a faith-filled community.

While faith is the binding element in Catholic schools, the Church reiterates that parents are the first teachers of their children. Holding this tenet, Catholic school communities expand beyond the walls of school buildings to envelop the family as an integral part of the school community. Together teachers, administrators, staff, students and parents fuel the light of faith by integrating culture with faith and faith with living.

On the 28th of August, 1963, a century following Abraham Lincoln's historic Emancipation Proclamation that liberated the slaves, a young Martin Luther King ascended the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. There, he shared his dream for America. Over 200,000 individuals, both black and white, gathered to hear him. The vision shared on the steps of the Memorial that day became the aspiration of an entire generation. Below, please find the full text of the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech.

I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon of hope to millions of slaves, who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity. But one hundred years later, the colored America is still not free. One hundred years later, the life of the colored American is still sadly crippled by the manacle of segregation and the chains of discrimination.

One hundred years later, the colored American lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity. One hundred years later, the colored American is still languishing in the corners of American society and finds himself an exile in his own land. So we have come here today to dramatize a shameful condition.

In a sense we have come to our Nation's Capital to cash a check. When the architects of our great republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir.

This note was a promise that all men, yes, black men as well as white men, would be guaranteed the inalienable rights of life liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note insofar as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given its colored people a bad check, a check that has come back marked "insufficient funds."

But we refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt. We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. So we have come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and security of justice.

We have also come to his hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of Now. This is not time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism.

Now is the time to make real the promise of democracy.

Now it is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice.

Now it is the time to lift our nation from the quicksand of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood.

Now is the time to make justice a reality to all of God's children.

I would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment and to underestimate the determination of it's colored citizens. This sweltering summer of the colored people's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality. Nineteen sixty-three is not an end but a beginning. Those who hope that the colored Americans needed to blow off steam and will now be content will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual.

There will be neither rest nor tranquility in America until the colored citizen is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

We can never be satisfied as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities.

We cannot be satisfied as long as the colored person's basic mobility is from a smaller ghetto to a larger one.

We can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating "for white only."

We cannot be satisfied as long as a colored person in Mississippi cannot vote and a colored person in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote.

No, no we are not satisfied and we will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.

I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of your trials and tribulations. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom left you battered by storms of persecutions and staggered by the winds of police brutality.

You have been the veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive.

Go back to Mississippi, go back to Alabama, go back to South Carolina go back to Georgia, go back to Louisiana, go back to the slums and ghettos of our modern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed.

Let us not wallow in the valley of despair. I say to you, my friends, we have the difficulties of today and tomorrow.

I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed. We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal.

I have a dream that one day out in the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slaveowners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by their character.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day down in Alabama, with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification; that one day right down in Alabama little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers.

I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day every valley shall be engulfed, every hill shall be exalted and every mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plains and the crooked places will be made straight and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together.

This is our hope. This is the faith that I will go back to the South with. With this faith we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope.

With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood.

With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to climb up for freedom together, knowing that we will be free one day.

This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning "My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my father's died, land of the Pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring!"

And if America is to be a great nation, this must become true. So let freedom ring from the hilltops of New Hampshire. Let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York.

Let freedom ring from the heightening Alleghenies of Pennsylvania.

Let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado.

Let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California.

But not only that, let freedom, ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia.

Let freedom ring from every hill and molehill of Mississippi and every mountainside.

When we let freedom ring, when we let it ring from every tenement and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old spiritual, "Free at last, free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last."

Commitment to justice and equality shapes our community's tomorrow.
